Global Education Goes Digital – Database ENGLOB Gets New Feature

The database “European Network on Global Learning (ENGLOB)” now features the searching tool for “digitalization”. A growing number of organizations with a background in Global Education tackle topics around digital transformation. They use digital tools and shed light on the many changes digitalization brings with it.

ENGLOB connects organizations in the field of Global Education all over Europe. Registration is free and available in German, English, Spanish and French. The listed categories refer to themes, partnerships and forms of organization. The „digitalization“ filter now also connects organizations that deal with digital transformation from the perspective of Global Education or use digital tools in an innovative way themselves.

“Who in Greece has experience with collaborating via video chats, who in Spain is wondering what digital change means for human rights, who in Finland is working on the topic of resource mining for digital devices? – ENGLOB now helps you with all these questions”, says Dr. Kambiz Ghawami, chairman of World University Service – German Committee e. V. (WUS).

ENGLOB allows partnerships to be established at local, regional, national and European level. The database contains information on more than a thousand private, intermediary, and governmental organizations as well as on EU institutions and EFTA member states. ENGLOB is managed by WUS and was created in cooperation with the North-South Center of the Council of Europe (Lisbon), Development Education Exchange in Europe Project (DEEEP) and the Development Education Forum of CONCORD. The database was conceived and developed between 2003 and 2006, with financial support from the European Union.

The database ENGLOB can be found at www.globaleducation.de.
